The American Friends of Jamaica: The Art of Caring

By Entertainment Writer

On Saturday night, May 19, 2007, the Manhattan, New York's based American Friends of Jamaica held its 3rd Annual South Florida's Annual Peacock Ball at the Ritz-Carlton, Coconut Grove, Miami. The main Ballroom was the venue and this Gala Event par excellence raised at least more than $150,000 from the more than four hundred guests which paid $350.00 each to rub shoulders with the Captains of Industry from Jamaica, New York and South Florida. This leading Caribbean-American Philanthropic Organization which celebrates its 25th Anniversary is led by Ambassador Glen A. Holden, ret, and its executive director, Ms. Keisha Phillips and they have aggressively targeted South Florida due its large base of Jamaican-American corporate, professional and intellectual elites who want to give back to their homeland, a portion of their human and financial resources.

Jamaica has its genesis in American Diplomacy. The former American Ambassadors and Consulars who served in Jamaica are the backbone of this Philanthropic Organization. Therefore, it was not surprising to see at this event Mrs. Sue Cobb the most recent Ambassador to Jamaica during the last years of the Patterson regime.

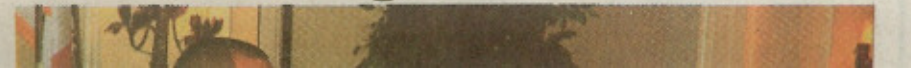

This praiseworthy Philanthropic

Organization over its quarter century existence has funded more than one hundred charities throughout Jamaica. These varied charities are in the related fields of education at all levels-, the environment, healthcare, human resources and economic development, drug addiction and rehabilitation; historical buildings preservation; housing for the
